The Late Orville Loving, of Nelson County.

LOVINGSTON, VA., September 12.-Special.)-This village, nestling among the mountains of Nelson, has just lost by fiesth two of its best-known citizenslajor Orville Loving, in the 23d year of his age, and Mr. W. S. Loving, his cousin, who for some years past has been Comabssioner of the Revenue in this district. The latter was the son of the late Gene-ral William S. Loving, of Nelson, and was about 48 years old. He had been suffering from meningitis for several

most remarkable men in Virginia. Born in 1805, and receiving such an education as the old-field schools and village academies then afforded, he moved in early manhood to Nashville, Tenn. He was an ardent Democrat, and his power as a writer and speaker soon attracted the attention of Felix Grundy, Andrew Jackson, and other leading Democrats of the State. At the earnest solicitation of frundy and Jackson be became the ditor of the Nashville Union, then the adding Demogratic paper of Tennessee, and the recognized organ of Jackson. At and the recognized organ of Jackson. At that time Parson Browniow was editor of the Knoxville Whig and Major Loving gave him such a scorching in his paper that Browniow went to Nashville with the avowed intention of whipping Major Loving, but after reaching that city and talking the matter over with some of his frierds he was induced to return home without encountering the plucky young Virginian. Just before this Major Loving had exposed and denounced a scheme which, it was alleged, three prominent Whig politicians of Nashville had formed to carry the election in that congressional district. His strictures were so severe that they declared they would chastise him on first sight. Major Loving armed himself, and went to look for them. Single-handed and slone he met them on the orbits of the control of the contr the public square, put them to rout, and | Drink "Colonia chased them into a grocery store, where | rheumatic Gout.

The speaker treated this subject generally and specially, and it is not too much to say that the address, from whatever point considered, was one of the finest ever delivered at Hampden-Sidney.

The session thus opened promises to be highly successful. A larger number of students have already been entolled than were matriculated during the whole of last session, a good many more are expected. The professors are all in their places and in classes are being organized for work. The Union and Philanthrona societies neld their first meeting for the session last hight, and will initiate matly

GILMORE & SPOTTS, FURNITURE. Thursday afternoon was one of the most brilliant in its history. The large audience filled the beautiful and spacious chapel. The professors of the Theological Seminary, Governor McKinney, R. M. Dickenson, Esq.; Professor Blackwell, of Randolph-Macon College, and other distinguished gentlemen honored the occasion with their presence. There was a great outpouring of people from Farmville and the neighborhood, and the students of the college and seminary were out in force. The exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. Harding, of Farmville, and the president of the college introduced the speaker of the occasion, Dr. John A. Cunningham, of Farmville, whose subject was, "The Privileges and Duties Attaching to the Students of Hampden-Sidney College." The speaker treated this subject generally and specially, and it is not too much to watered. LOW PRICES! NEW GOODS!
